Tessa Crilly is a health economist with 10 years experience in senior health planning and management in the NHS, specialising in service review, population needs assessment, resource allocation, cost benefit evaluations and workforce planning. She became an independent consultant in 1993, and has worked with a wide client base on over 200 projects in the UK, Eastern Europe and Central Asia. She has a particular interest in applying evidence-based approaches to practical problems, mixing quantitative analysis with qualitative research methods. Tessa graduated from the London School of Economics where she also obtained a PhD in the field of economics and health policy.

Tessa can be contacted on:

E: tessa@crystalblueconsulting.com

M: 07866 303710